Exadata Database Service for Developers (ExaC@C)

All-in-One Datasheet (Beta) Produced by DBExpert

Overview

Exadata Cloud@Customer enables users to develop applications on Exadata Cloud@Customer using a no-cost Oracle Database license. Customers can provision a new "Exadata Database-Developer" type of VM Cluster to run Exadata Database Service and will only pay for the cost of the infrastructure. If using the previously idle capacity of an existing Exadata Cloud@Customer, customers will be able to develop in an Exadata Database-Developer VM Cluster for no additional cost.

The Exadata Database-Developer VM Cluster type is intended for developing applications only and is subject to limitations to prevent running production workloads in a developer VM Cluster. Limits will be placed on the number of threads per PDB, the amount of memory per PDB, the size of the database per PDB, and the number of sessions per PDB. Advanced database features like RAC and Data Guard will not be available.

Unlike other free alternatives targeted at developers that provide no support, Exadata Database Service for Developers provides assistance from Oracle Support with SRs filed as "Technical Issue" or "General Guidance".
